Crook wants Merritt

CHICAGO, Aug 3.—Specials from Laramie and other points in the Indian territory this morning deny the reports of Crook's reverses, which came by the way of Leavenworth. Crook had lost no men at the very last accounts and was still in communication with Terry. He is only waiting for Merritt, on whose arrival he will attack the Indians, who are massing about 40 miles from his camp.

Crops in Iowa.

KEOKUK, Iowa, August 3.—Crop reports from the State of Iowa show a good general average.

Tilden's Letter Still Delayed.

The Tribune's Saratoga special says Democrats must wait until Saturday or Monday for Tilden's letter of acceptance. The Governor was expected this evening and a large circle of politicians waited to receive him. There was great disappointment when a messenger appeared and said he was not on the train. The messenger bore a note to Hendricks from Tilden stating that the latter's brother was dangerously sick and requesting that the conference over the letter be postponed until Friday. Hendricks' letter is prepared but will not be published until the conference with Tilden. The feeling here is that Tilden has not fully elaborated his letter and that the sickness of his brother, while giving more time, is very unfortunate, as the delay is likely to diminish the interest in his interpretation of the Democratic platform.

Commutation of Adler and Furst's Sentences.

NEW YORK, Aug 3.—The Tribune's St Louis special from Jefferson City says an order from the President granting a release for Adler and Furst was received to-day by the U. S. Marshal. The President's order commutes the sentences of Adler and Furst to three months imprisonment in the county jail, which has already expired. The conditions are, however, that the prisoners withdraw their writ of error to the circuit court, the affirmation of the district court's judgment of condemnation, in which the confiscation of their establishments is ordered, and that they pay the fine of $10,000 imposed by the court. Adler and Furst were distillers at St. Louis and formed part of the circle which was convicted of conspiracy to defraud the revenue.

Suicide of an Artist

NEW YORK, Aug 3.—On the morning of the 24th of July Mr Jewett, formerly an artist on Harper's Weekly, was found dead in his hotel in Jersey City with a bullet hole in his head. By his side was a revolver with a chamber discharged. An investigation by the coroner showed that Jewett suicided. After his funeral it was learned that Jewett, before death, bequeathed his entire estate, $60,000, to Alfred Cox, proprietor of the hotel—had cut off his wife without a dollar and disinherited his three children. Then suspicion arose that Jewett's death was caused by foul play. At the chief of police's investigation last evening Cox asked that the matter be thoroughly ventilated and declared he knew nothing of the contents of the will.

Necessity for the Nomination of Good Men.

The Times' editorial on Orth: "This is the time when the Republican nominees ought to be men about whose career there will be no need for apology or explanation. It does not greatly matter whether their vulnerability is their fault or misfortune. Candidates who head the Republican ticket in critical States must be men of acknowledged strength and unimpeachable integrity, who are as free from the discredit of dubious political associations as from the misfortune of financial embarrassments."

NEW YORK, Aug 2.—It is announced that the Secretary of the Treasury will sell [illegible] another installment of the Geneva award invested in the 5 per cent bonds to meet the additional judgments of the court of [illegible], supposed to be several two and [illegible] millions.

NEW YORK, Aug 2.—Senator Robertson of South Carolina received the following dispatch from Columbia this evening:

COLUMBIA, Aug 2.

The coroner's inquest held over the victims at Hamburg has brought its labors to a close. The verdict has been published. It charges Gen. M. C. Butler, Col. A. P. Butler, Dr. Pierce Butler, Rev. E. [illegible]'s Account of the Impeachment Trial.

NEW YORK, August 3.—The Tribune's Washington [illegible] says: The verdict of the Senate in the Belknap case to-day was a farce. It reminded a [illegible] member of Congress of the verdict of a jury which tried a man for assault and battery. The jury found the man not guilty if he would leave the State. The fact that the vote was to be taken at 12 o'clock to-day was widely advertised, but attracted comparatively few people to the capitol. A half hour before the time for the [illegible] court to meet the galleries were hardly half full, and neither were they at any time during the afternoon, but the people crowded the floor. [illegible] rows of chairs were arranged behind the [illegible] of the Senators to accommodate twenty or thirty members of the House. [illegible] members were out of their seats. Many [illegible] to hear the giving of the verdict. William M. Evarts occupied Dawes' seat during a portion of the time; he afterward retired to a seat in the rear. Chief Justice Waite of the supreme court was [illegible] and also Chief Justice [illegible]. The [illegible] chamber held [illegible] few Senators, many being detained from their [illegible] by sickness and two or three others were out of town. During the preliminaries many were [illegible] preparing the explanations of their votes, [illegible] whose explanation was very elaborate, apparently gave some assistance to Spencer and [illegible] of Nevada, the last named Senator in turn [illegible] consultation with Howe and [illegible]. Conkling [illegible] and the explanation to the House [illegible] discussion occurred between them [illegible] regard to it. Booth was the first on the Republican side to declare Belknap guilty. He was [illegible] followed by Cameron of Pennsylvania, which [illegible] surprised many [illegible]. He was the only senator who voted not guilty without giving an explanation, and Mr [illegible] was the [illegible] member who voted not guilty on the ground that the Senate had not jurisdiction [illegible]. After the result on the first [illegible] all interest seemed [illegible] were quickly [illegible] general remark about [illegible] verdict of not guilty would have [illegible] the respondent.

Silver Bill—Black Friday Investigation

NEW YORK, Aug [illegible]

Adjournment

The Tribune's Washington [illegible]

[illegible] at any time after the [illegible] make the [illegible] place. The experience of both Republicans and Democrats of the last two or three Mondays [illegible] make the representatives of either party anxious for the rules to go [illegible] permit.

It is understood that Morrison has concluded to postpone calling his resolution until Friday or Saturday, so that the time between its adoption and the final adjournment may be as brief as possible. It is by no means certain that the Senate will agree to the [illegible] resolution fixing the time of adjournment if it is passed by the House. The Senators generally have not so much to call them home at this time of the year as representatives, who must look after their nominations and secondly to take charge of the campaign. Several important matters still remain to be disposed of in the Senate before it can consent to adjourn. One of these is the report of the [illegible] bill and the committee report on the condition of affairs in Mississippi, which will be made on Saturday. The Senate desires to debate at length before taking action. Many Republican Senators also feel that the House has been responsible for the unusual length of the session this year. It will not be strange if Morrison's resolution, provided it be sent to the Senate by the last of the week, be referred to committee or laid on the table.

Alleged Deficiency in Naval Bureau

NEW YORK, Aug 3.—The Tribune's Washington special says: It having been asserted in the report of the majority of the committee on naval affairs that a million dollars remained unaccounted for in the bureau of clothing, Gen. Walworth sent a statement to Gen. Banks showing the amount deposited in the Treasury three years before Walworth took charge of the bureau. Whitthorne, chairman of the committee, said he never doubted the integrity of Walworth.

Mail Service to China.

WASHINGTON, Aug 3.—The Senate to-day passed a joint resolution allowing the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. to carry the U. S. mails between San Francisco and China in the iron steamships City of Sydney, City of New York and City of San Francisco, instead of the wooden side wheel steamers now doing that service.

Nomination

The President nominated R. N. Lynch of Massachusetts Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, vice [illegible] resigned.

Whisky Frauds Investigation.

The sub committee on the whisky frauds to-day examined ex Supervisor Sutton, who said he did not discover anything to implicate Logan and Farwell, though there appeared to be suspicious circumstances about the latter which were explained. Yaryan was ignorant of the law. The only way he could account for the impediments thrown in his way in the whisky prosecutions in Chicago was that Yaryan was working in the interest of the whisky ring, and Brooks of the secret service believed so. Witness never spoke three minutes with Babcock until the latter was indicted, when he told witness he understood Bluford Wilson had given the chief of the detective service $500 to induce witness to secure conviction. Witness denied the story and said he believed the ring would have been more effectually broken up without granting immunity. Some of the pardoned are stealing now. This is in the face of Bangs' statement that the ring was completely demoralized and broken up.

Morton's Secretary to be Chief Clerk in the Postoffice Department

WASHINGTON, Aug 3.—It is reported that Geo. Burbank, private secretary to Senator Morton, is to be chief clerk in the Postoffice Department.

Knott's Vindication.

CHICAGO, August 3.—The Inter Ocean's Washington special says of the vote on Hurd's motion to recommit the resolution exonerating Knott, all the judiciary except Knott and Hurd voted for the recommittal. Lord, New, Hoffman, Jones of Kentucky, Randall and Morrison voted with Knott; many did not vote at all. The affair has been commented on this evening, and Knott's course universally condemned. The Democrats see it cannot but injure them seriously, and are anxious to have it understood that the blame should be cast individually on Knott and not on the party.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Aug 3.—[illegible]

The bill to [illegible] and fix the signal service [illegible] amended and passed.

[illegible] dollar [illegible] standard silver [illegible] for any amount except for customs [illegible] the public debt [illegible] laid on the table.

[illegible] gave notice that he would move to take up the post route bill as soon as the river and harbor appropriation bill was disposed of.

The morning hour having expired, the Senate resumed consideration of the river and harbor appropriation bill, the pending question being on the amendment of Mitchell conferring on the U. S. circuit court for the district of Oregon jurisdiction to hear and determine proceedings for the condemnation of lands taken for a canal around the Cascades of the Columbia river. A lengthy discussion ensued as to the power of the Federal government to [illegible], in which Mitchell and Kelly participated. The amendment was rejected—yeas 16, nays 31.

Kelly submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of War to take possession of land, etc., after the title to same shall be procured by the United States under the laws of Oregon in such manner as the legislature of that State prescribe. After discussion the amendment was rejected.

The amendment proposed by the committee, authorizing the use of land and providing that the value thereof may be ascertained in the mode provided by the laws of Oregon for condemnation of lands for public uses in that State, was agreed to.

An amendment to strike out the second section of the bill authorizing the survey of rivers and harbors throughout the country, and insert a section appropriating $40,000 for incidental repairs of harbors for which there is no special appropriation provided by law, and for the examination and survey of such rivers and harbors as in the judgment of the Secretary of War will subserve the interests of commerce, was agreed to.

Conkling submitted an amendment providing that it shall be unlawful for any person or corporation to use or occupy any pier or breakwater or any other work of the United States for the improvement of rivers and harbors without the consent of the Secretary of War and without complying with such conditions as he may prescribe, and providing that any person or corporation who shall knowingly violate the provisions of this act shall be subject to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year or a fine not exceeding $500. This provision of the bill to take effect from October 1st.

Edmunds offered an amendment providing that any person who shall unlawfully injure any breakwater or other work of the United States for the improvement of rivers and harbors shall upon conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000.

Thurman submitted a substitute for the amendment of Edmunds so as to direct the Secretary of War to report to Congress on the first Monday in December what legislation is necessary to protect piers, breakwaters and other public works of the United States against trespass.

Hamlin moved to amend the substitute of Thurman so as to direct the Secretary of War to report also instances in the United States where piers, breakwaters or other works of public improvement by the United States are used and injured by corporations. Amendment accepted, and the question being on the substitute, it was agreed to.

Edmunds renewed his amendment; agreed to—yeas 26, nays 16. The bill was then reported to the Senate and the amendment made in committee of the whole was concurred in.

The question being on the passage of the bill, Edmunds submitted a substitute appropriating $3,000,000 for repairs and preservation of works commenced and for the improvement of rivers and harbors, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War. Yeas 1[illegible], nays 16. The bill then passed.

Those who voted in the negative were Cockrell, Conkling, Eaton, Edmunds, Hamlin, Hitchcock, Jones, McCreery, Morrill and Wadleigh. The bill as passed appropriates $5,000,000, the exact sum recommended by the committee on appropriations, no change having been made in any amendment reported by the committee.

Anthony of Rhode Island, from the committee on printing, offered a resolution to print 10,000 extra copies of the President's message on the Hamburg massacre; placed on the calendar.

Hamlin moved to take up the bill establishing post routes so as to have it as unfinished business; agreed to. Adjourned.

House.

Knott declared himself perfectly satisfied with the unanimous exoneration which he had received from the committee, and read a paragraph from a Philadelphia newspaper which reiterated the charge that he had infamously suppressed the Caldwell dispatch, and would have to say a word about it. He regretted the absence of the member from Maine and alluded to his action which accompanied the resolution and gave rise to this investigation. It was said Blaine was ill; that the hand of God was on him. Knott threw out a doubt that Blaine was really ill, and strongly hinted that his illness was disguised and only a further cover to postpone and obstruct investigation. Knott referred to the attacks of the partisan press inspired by Blaine on him. Knott was ill and labored under great difficulty while speaking, so that much of his speech was unintelligible. He went extensively into the history of the Blaine investigation. He summarized the testimony of Harrison, Scott and Rollins. With regard to the testimony of the latter Knott said his evidence, taken as a whole, had corroborated the statement of Harrison before the committee, and had left the impression that there was something it was necessary to get—Caldwell's testimony. When the committee proposed to telegraph to Caldwell, Blaine objected, but perhaps Blaine had good reasons for raising these objections. He went on to rehearse the story of the Caldwell telegram and said as soon as he received it he thought it extremely [illegible], and it then occurred to him that it was a scheme concocted this side of the Atlantic to make the judiciary committee and the House itself the instrument of perpetrating a fraud on the people. He was convinced of it, he said, on hearing Mulligan relate the circumstances of his famous interview with Blaine, wherein the latter groveled in imploring Mulligan not to destroy him. In the face of his pledge to return the letters Blaine coolly put them in his pocket. He said after that he had ground for believing Blaine would not scruple to be a party to the concocting of the Caldwell telegram or anything else that would tend to promote his private or political ends. Passing then to the dispatch sent to Caldwell under what he called his mellifluous pseudonym of Favo, he said that Favo was the Italian word for honeycomb, and he considered the name very appropriate in consideration of the honey which Caldwell had gathered through the instrumentality of his arch broker James G. Blaine, and of his being the gushing receptacle of the precious treasures extracted from him by the active and disinterested Blaine. Caldwell had adopted the dispatch concocted for him, but he would just as readily adopt a dispatch requesting him to say Blaine stood by and gave directions when God wheeled the earth out of the chaos of which the world was made.

Frye replied. He did not know when he was more pained than he was to-day, or when his feelings had been so wounded as they had been to-day. An attempt by him to renew the testimony under Tarbox resolution was entirely unnecessary, and the attempt to review it and pronounce judgment by the man from Kentucky [illegible] when the case had been postponed until next December was without the slightest justification in honor or parliamentary law. That testimony, when reported to the House, would convict [illegible] Blaine had never anything to do with [illegible] Fort Smith [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] Knott [illegible] mean to say that [illegible]

Frye.—[illegible] own inference.

[illegible]

Hunton.—I desire to ask you who [illegible] mean to reflect on my character.

Frye.—I can't say that in my best opinion, from the commencement of the investigation of Blaine down to the time of Blaine's attack upon the third, there was perhaps no more than ordinary prejudice in your mind resulting from the attack which Blaine made on the floor of the House against the Democratic side. I mean to say further that after Blaine made his speech in this House on Monday, after he read the letter of Robbins stating he had been called by you into your room and had been questioned for a long time, and after you replied to Blaine, your mind has not been up to that time to this without a prejudice against him.

Hunton.—And that is all you mean to say?

Frye.—That is all I mean to say.

Hunton then proceeded to answer the statement of Frye that nobody on the committee believed that Blaine was involved in the Little Rock bonds transaction. He said he had endeavored to keep his mind clear until the testimony was in. It was not till then he could come to no conclusion.

Frye asked if he had justified Knott in bringing in the matter before the House, and insisted on an answer, but Hunton said Knott acted for himself.

Hale criticised the conduct of Knott, and said there was no one present who had not been pained by the exhibition to-day. He appealed to both sides to vote against the report exonerating Knott. No man after hearing Knott's speech would doubt there was malice in his heart. If Blaine was in his seat he would no more have made that speech than a mousing owl dares venture forth when the eagle is abroad. [Applause.]

[illegible] directly expressed regret at Knott's taking such advantage of the [illegible] afforded him and compared the treatment given Blaine to the generous treatment shown Kerr by the Republicans, though Kerr's [illegible] was less complete than Blaine's and his [illegible].

Hoar, another member of the judiciary committee, said he assented to the report because he believed Knott incapable of suppression. The gentleman's high position had led him to think [illegible] suspicions growing out of the facts before the committee. He had listened to the speech of Knott with the profoundest sorrow and shame, and had he heard it before signing the report he should not have signed it.

Lawrence, another member of the committee, expressed regret at to-day's spectacle. He would now insist that the report he had signed be recommitted for review.

Hurd, who presented the report, said the minority did not regret what had happened to-day more than he did. He supposed there would be no debate on the report, and he had given Frye his word of honor to that effect. He supposed Knott would only speak of his individual and personal exculpation. He regretted the debate because it had compelled those who kindly signed the report to withdraw their approval. He would not express any opinion of Knott's propositions. A report had been presented which affirmed that gentleman an exculpation and which the minority of the committee signed cheerfully. He maintained the report was true, but six members of the judiciary committee having requested him to withdraw the report for further action, he now moved that it be recommitted.

Knott arose in great excitement and said one day flowers fall, and for what? Because they have been struck by the frost of truth. After the ship of line struck its colors it little expected it would be compelled to continue the conflict, yet nevertheless it seems such is the case. As to the speech which I have delivered, and which has caused so much pain to the gentlemen on the other side, I have to say I would not alter one single word which I have uttered. The man who supposes that I will sit tamely by and submit to an outrageous false assault such as was made on me on this floor, and such as has been repeated in a thousand different shapes and in ten thousand different articles throughout the country, and that I will not say a word in my defense or in my vindication, mistakes his man. Turning around to his own side of the House, he with great animation and in a spirit of defiance continued: Abandon me if you wish—vote as you please. I stand here on every word I made, and I repeat, as much as I may regret the loss of friendship of the gentleman from Maine (Frye), who could surrender it on such slight cause, I must say it certainly was not strong friendship, and that if we must part [illegible] [Applause and laughter.] [illegible] the head and front of my offending. It is said I have prejudiced the case here. I trust that such insinuations were inadvertently made. In case they are not justified by facts [illegible] that such an impropriety is absolutely false. [illegible] only to indicate the attention [illegible] certain facts in regard to the Caldwell telegram without expressing an opinion on those facts at all, [illegible] without having prejudiced the matter under investigation. [illegible] They can be in their sentiments [illegible] and say Blaine is immaculate like [illegible] that are girded by frost from the purest snow. There is no harm in that. I have not said that he is guilty or innocent. I have attempted no opinion on the subject matter of the report, but as to the authenticity of the Caldwell telegram I have stated, and I reiterate here, and would reiterate it in the court of heaven (contemptuous laughter on the Republican side), that I believe it was got up in interest to subserve the purposes of Jas. G. Blaine. It has been said that I wouldn't have dared to make my speech had he been here; that I would have bowed low, and in a bondsman's key and with bated breath and whispering humbleness spoken very differently. I am not responsible for the absence of the late member for [illegible]; I had no act nor part in it. The floor was as free to him as to me, but he saw proper to withdraw from his arena, where no Democrat, no political opponent of his, made a charge against him, but where he had been assailed by his own friends, and that too before he had vindicated his reputation for integrity as a man and as a leader of his party. I was in no way responsible for that, whether he was acting for good. Now the whole gist of the matter is simply the authenticity of the Caldwell dispatch, and as to whether or not I acted in good faith in my connection with that matter. The judiciary committee has said that I was not blameworthy in the matter, and if they chose to retract, so be it.

Hurd, in making his motion to recommit, said he did it with the object that the minority of the committee may have an opportunity of presenting to the House a minority report.

The report was accordingly recommitted.

Singleton, from the conference committee on the [illegible] appropriation bill, reported the committee failed to agree. Report adopted and new conference committee appointed, consisting of Singleton, Hol[illegible] and Foster.

Morrison, chairman of committee on ways and means, reported a resolution providing for adjournment of Congress on Monday next at 12 o'clock.

[illegible] called for the yeas and nays, which was refused, and the resolution adopted.

Randall moved that the House go into committee of the whole in order to allow Garfield to speak in reply to Lamar, pending which House adjourned.

Operations of the S. F. Mint

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug 3.—The mint in this city coined $4,000,000 last month, being the largest out turn for any month by this or any other mint in the United States. One hundred and twenty seven thousand trade dollars were coined. Hereafter the execution of these coins will be confined to the San Francisco mint, and the amount will be limited to the export demand.

Prominent Journalist Dead

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug 3.—Chas. W. Crocker, well known throughout the coast as a journalist, died at his residence in this city last night.

Smallpox in San Francisco.

The smallpox has somewhat abated in the last two days. Only ten new cases were reported yesterday and nine this morning, with two deaths to-day.

Aid for Servia.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug 3.—The Sclavonic residents of this city are sending forward considerable amounts of money for the relief of their suffering countrymen in Bosnia and Herzegovina. The relief board has sent a delegate from here to the seat of war, defraying all his expenses for outfit and travel.

John Miller's Case Postponed

John Miller, alias Woodruff, Contract and Finance Co. defaulter, was to be tried to-day in the municipal court on the indictments for embezzlement found against him, but as it was shown that the defendant was sick and unable to appear in court the case went over until Monday, when it is expected Miller will be ready for trial.

Suicide.

MARYSVILLE, Aug 3.—To-day an old and well known German citizen named August Billhartz committed suicide by taking strychnine. He was 56 years of age and a native of Baden. He leaves a wife and seven children. Deceased was well known in this vicinity, having resided in this city for the last 17 years. No cause given for the act.

News from Campo. Fight between Mexicans and Indians.

SAN DIEGO, August 3.—Col. Bernard telegraphs from Campo this afternoon that the Mexicans in Tecarte valley arrested Captain and a few other Indians for killing Blanco, and were going to take them to San Rafael yesterday, but their friends came here, purchased ammunition, went back to Tecarte and released their men by force. Some shooting was done, but no one hurt. The Indians all came back here with their families. Afterwards about sixty armed bucks went back to have an understanding with the Mexicans about the affair. Considerable excitement prevails in this neighborhood, and there may be some trouble.

OREGON.

A correspondent from Oswego says that all traces of smallpox have disappeared and the usual quietness reigns.

The grain crop in Rogue river valley will be light this year, but more than enough for the home demand will be raised.

A heavy fire is raging in the woods on the Fort Lane hill, Jackson county, which is destroying much valuable timber.

Ralph Geer brought the Statesman a specimen of wheat this week which beats all up to date. Twenty eight stalks are produced from one grain of wheat, each containing nearly 100 grains.

Hay harvest is about over in Washington county with a full average yield, and farmers have commenced harvesting their winter wheat, which promises a fair crop. Spring grain looks well.

Mrs Mary Woods, a widow of Hillsboro, now nearly 80 years of age, has woven this spring with her own hands nearly 100 yards of hit-and-miss carpet, besides doing her usual house work.

An old lady named Wooley fell down the steps of the porch at Forest Grove a short time since and broke her leg. Dr Bowlby set the broken limb and the patient is doing very well to be 80 years of age.

Clackamas county farmers have gone to harvesting in earnest and the fields are fast being cleared of the golden grain. A prominent farmer from Molalla says that the crops will not average as much by 20 per cent as they did last season.

Some dogs got among Mr Brooks' sheep near Hillsboro last Sunday night and killed 8 and wounded 14 others. The dogs were tracked to their homes, and in the presence of their owners were sent to that land where they will find no more good sheep to kill.

The farmers and citizens generally of Linn and adjacent counties will hold a meeting at the court house in Albany on Friday, the 11th day of August, to consult in relation to freights and to prepare plans to remedy existing evils in regard to the navigation of the Willamette river.

Deputy Sheriff Anderson informs the Hillsboro Independent that a week ago last Sunday Capt. Smith's house, about a mile north of Holcomb's place, caught fire while Mr Smith and family were away from home, and was consumed with all it contained. Mr Smith is truly unfortunate, having had his dwelling with household goods burned up in Tillamook county about a year ago. The value of the goods this time was about $400, which was a considerable loss to Mr Smith, as it was all he had. It is not known how the dwelling was fired. One of the beds was found in the yard burned up, where it is supposed some one dragged it when the dwelling was burning. Mr S. thinks that perhaps [illegible] went into the dwelling to sleep and accidentally set the building on fire, and tried to save the bed, but was unsuccessful.

The Salem Mercury has the following item: A [illegible] attempt was made upon Mr [illegible] and family, living on the Rickreal, [illegible] county, last Sunday. [illegible] that article of food.

FRUIT PRESERVATION

SOME FACTS WORTHY THE ATTENTION OF OREGONIANS.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

To a stranger arriving in San Francisco at this season of the year nothing is more noticeable or astonishing than the abundance and quality of the fruit crop. It is seen exposed for sale everywhere. The two thousand or more retail stands scattered throughout the city do a thriving business and make a very attractive display, while the importers and commission merchants occupying whole streets and handling thousands upon thousands of crates and boxes appear to be doing business enough to supply the world. In the early hours of the morning the scene about the Fruit and Produce Exchange is one that will well pay the late riser to get up and witness. Then the steamers from the Sacramento river and about the bay arrive loaded down to the guards with tons upon tons of freshly picked and luscious products of the orchard, which before nightfall will probably be consumed by the yet sleepy denizens of the metropolis. With the return of each season, and the coming into bearing of the thousands of fruit trees recently planted, the business increases in such a degree that the query, What is to be done with the surplus fruit? is beginning to be very anxiously asked—and ere long will be seriously considered. Last fall the Fruit Growers' Association held a series of meetings regarding the regulation of the price of green fruit and the preserving of the surplus. The commission men and fruit purchasers were invited to the meetings and asked to join in the movement. Many of them consented, and the project of concerted and profitable co-operation was apparently settled, when the Grangers became a little suspicious, elected the old officers of the Fruit Association, and the whole concern fell to the ground. It was the intention to form a partnership of all the prominent fruit growers who sent their fruit to this market, and had the details of the new association been properly carried out, the movement would undoubtedly been a success. But it wasn't, and some new project must soon be settled upon either by the

FRUIT GROWERS OR CAPITALISTS

to take care of the surplussage. One thing is absolutely certain. San Francisco, although the largest fruit consuming city in the country, cannot use one-half of the fruit that is thrust upon it. At present the only means of using the surplus fruit brought to this market is that of canning, which has been carried on successfully for many years, the profits, however, all going into the pockets of the canners, with absolutely nothing left for the discouraged producers. The canners have it all their own way, merely purchasing the surplus of each day's shipments and such large lots as they can make special and paying bargains for. At present there are six prominent firms in this city engaged in the canning business: Lusk & Co., Cutting & Co., Code, Elfelt & Co., James King of William & Co., Sol. Wagenheim & Co. and N. Goetjen of Hayes valley. The total capital invested in the business is estimated to be over $1,000,000, and the value of the goods turned out between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. During the busy season employment is given to nearly 2,000 men, women and children, and every year the business increases as fruit becomes cheaper and the demand for the product becomes greater. The following statistics of the quantity of fruit purchased and put up by these establishments during the season of 1875, with the average prices paid therefor, will undoubtedly be of interest:

Apricots, 250 tons, at 4c	$20,000
Pears 300 tons, at 3c	18,000
Peaches, 200 tons, at 4½c	18,000
Cherries, 25 tons, at 9c	4,500
Currants, 132 tons at 3½c	9,240

This shows that the amount paid by the canners for these five varieties of fruit alone was $69,740.

The quantities of other fruits and vegetables canned were about as follows: Tomatoes 800 tons, blackberries 110 tons, raspberries 84 tons, sugar peas 62½ tons, string beans 47 tons, strawberries 50 tons, green corn 50 tons, [illegible] the same quantity of nectarines and quinces. The factories also turned out over 100 tons of jams and jellies. Another branch of the business is the manufacture of vinegar and catsups, of which the figures show that 1,700 barrels of the former and over 800 barrels of the latter were made during the year. This showing, while very creditable indeed, will, without doubt, be almost DOUBLED THE COMING SEASON.

The fruit crop as a whole is infinitely better, and the manufacturers are making immense preparations for the peach crop, which is said to be extremely abundant all over the State. The peach is the favorite fruit of the canners, that is when they get the right variety. The peaches now coming into market by the thousands of baskets, and known as the Tillotson, is an early variety, and not used by the canners to any great extent owing to their watery condition, but when the Crawfords begin to arrive the canners will take every basket of the surplus, and the peach market will then show better prices than now, when a half bushel basket of this fruit can be purchased at from 25 cents to $1.25 at any of the commission stores. Next in importance to the peach for canning purposes comes the apricot. The demand for this fruit in the East is immense, and millions of cans could be disposed of annually, could they be produced. Blackberries are also in great demand, and the price established this season by the canners is five cents per pound, at which price they stand prepared to take tons upon tons with a certainty of sale as soon as they can be put up. The other small fruits are in more or less demand, with the exception of strawberries, which do not stand preservation very well, especially those grown by irrigation in this State. The canning of green corn is carried on quite extensively to supply the local demand, and an article as acceptable as the most popular Eastern brand has been turned out by the manufacturers of this coast. Outside of the city and immediate vicinity the preservation of fruits by the canning process is

RADICALLY BEING DEVELOPED.

Two or three years ago two brothers living at San Jose tried the experiment of putting up a few small fruits and found the business so profitable that they secured more capital by organizing a stock company, and are now doing business under the name of the San Jose Fruit Canning company, with a capacity of 500,000 cans per year. This season J. Routier, living at Brighton, near Sacramento, has commenced to preserve his whole fruit crop on his own premises. He has already put up over 40,000 quart cans of apricots, and intends to treat his peach crop in the same way, which will figure up something like 80,000 cans. This last stroke of enterprise is an idea worth the consideration of every large fruit grower in the State. The best canned fruit is put up where it is grown. The reason is obvious. Fruit to keep well must be in a perfect and solid condition. After it has been transported to the San Francisco market and [illegible] about for 48 hours [illegible] it is not in the [illegible] condition to can, but is used in that way in order to save what would otherwise be a dead loss. If the ordinary run of [illegible] fruits was [illegible] direct from the [illegible] to the Atlantic States [illegible] express for the [illegible] apricots, pears, plums [illegible] the ruling [illegible] Last season three [illegible] through the State.

BUYING UP ALL THE PEARS.

They could find shipping them East. They are already in the field [illegible] this year, and one of them informed the Chronicle reporter that if the whole State of California was planted over with Bartlett pears the crop would be bought in advance by Eastern fruit houses. The California Bartlett and Winter Nelis are the favorite varieties and bring from ten to twenty five cents apiece in the large Eastern cities. Lusk & Co. of this city have already contracted for 50 to 100 car loads—all they expect to be able to get. The bulk of the fruit shipments to the East, however, are made from Sacramento, Marysville and the surrounding country, as the commission merchants there have more time to attend to the necessary work. It requires a deal of care to make a shipment. The fruit has to be carefully assorted, wrapped up in fine tissue paper like oranges and lemons, and then packed in boxes weighing about fifty pounds. Four hundred of these boxes are packed in one car, making a weight of about ten tons. The car is provided in some [illegible] with ventilating fans, and the fruit arrives in the far East in first rate condition. The freight on one of these cars is something enormous. $900 in gold is the rate when attached to the express train, and $500 by slow freight. This high rate is said to be kept up by the exactions of the Union Pacific, and could the rate be reduced to say $300 through to Chicago, the capitalists of the East would soon buy all our wheat fields and turn them into orchards. The day is coming when the lightning train will make the fruit area of California immensely valuable, and turn into a [illegible] what to the crowded population of the East is now simply a luxury. But the process of canning and the expensive shipping East of green fruit is by no means the only way of preserving the products of our orchards. The process of preservation by drying, recently introduced, has become immensely popular and profitable. In fact, the drying process has met with such success that the dry fruit is

EAGERLY SOUGHT AFTER

In the Eastern cities, and brings higher prices than the canned article. A feature of the dried product is that it is freed from all water (from sixty to eighty per cent. of all fruit and vegetables being water), is put up in a shape to keep, no matter how little may be used, and can be transported to distant markets at a small cost and without a particle of risk. In this State factories are located at San Lorenzo, Centerville, San Jose, [illegible], Jackson, Vacaville, Los Angeles and Anaheim, with several new ones in different parts of the State in process of erection for the [illegible] of the coming season. In Oregon there are six factories, and the combined capacity of all on the coast is about 4,500 tons of the [illegible] of fruits for the working [illegible] of four months. The bulk of the Oregon dried product comes to this city. The dried goods find a very ready sale at remunerative prices, and at present the stock in store is quite low. The demand for this dried fruit comes from the trans-Pacific countries, up and down the coast, the mining regions, the States east of the Rocky Mountains, and more particularly from the Mississippi valley. We give a few quotations of California dry fruits in the Eastern markets just to show what can be done in this line: Apples, 20 cents per pound; peaches, 40 to 50 cents per pound; plums, 35 cents per pound. Blackberries and raspberries are exceedingly nice cured by the Alden method, and always sell for a high price. It is surprising that people do not raise more of them.

The above facts and figures relative to the present method of disposing of the fruit crop will not only interest fruit-growers but every citizen of the State of California. Fruit-growing must ever be an important branch, [illegible] we say the most important, of the [illegible] farming industries? The soil and [illegible] so well adapted to

AN ENDLESS VARIETY OF FRUITS

And California orchards are so generally exempt from the [illegible] and pests that infest orchards of countries where a humid atmosphere prevails, that this State has advantages for carrying on the business on a scale which, at the present, is but faintly realized. There are varieties of fruits, the [illegible] popular of which it is conceded can be produced in no other part of the world in [illegible] perfection and excellence as in the valleys and western slopes of the Sierra Nevada and Coast range of mountains. In fact these hill [illegible] are the very best for fruit raising purposes, and there is area enough, if properly [illegible] and improved, not to interfere in the [illegible] with wheat and hay producing lands. It is most satisfactory to note the change of sentiment throughout the State regarding fruit culture, and see how enthusiastically some of the shrewdest and wide awake men have taken hold in developing it. The outlook is a bright one. Compare the [illegible] fruit product of California with what is required for supplying the demand of the Atlantic States alone, and you have the argument in a nutshell. With the one exception of apples there is not one-half or even one-quarter a supply of fruits for the people of that country. A few of our large cities are better supplied than others, but how small a portion of the people have enough strawberries or raspberries or blackberries, to say nothing of cherries, plums, pears and grapes? In most places, even at the height of the season, these fruits can not be bought. Farmers and villagers must grow them or do without, and most of them take the [illegible] horn of the dilemma. Oftentimes a sudden glut in the market and consequent very low prices have brought

WITHIN THE REACH OF FAMILIES

Delicacies which, as a rule, have been unknown. This being so, low prices may create a new demand, and the future see all fruits within reach of the poor and moderately circumstanced as well as the rich. Again, according to the report of the chief of the bureau of statistics, there are annually imported into the United States fruits of all kinds, including nuts, to the value of over $18,000,000. This is the value at the several ports from which they were imported, not including freights or duties. When freights and duties are paid, they have cost the importers at least 50 per cent. more, making the cost in United States ports $18,806,352, or a sum equal to the largest sum California has ever received for any one year's export of wheat.

At a meeting of Shedd Grange, held July 29th, the following resolution was adopted: That the Willamette river is the highway of this valley, and the canal and locks at its falls the property of the State, and that any attempt to obstruct or monopolize their navigation against the interests of the people should be resisted by law and legislation, and, failing in this, to open the river by physical force.

penchant for reform, and [illegible] the subject whenever he can find or make suitable occasion therefor. He is chairman of the committee on appropriations, a position which affords peculiar opportunities for a reformer like him to advertise his admiring constituency of his exploits in that particular line of reform which pleases the people best, to wit, the cutting down of the expenses of government. Mr. Randall is a shrewd man, as well as a reformer, and is by no means slow to perceive the advantages which the situation presents to him; and every reading man is witness that he has been alert, instant in season and out of season, in striking heavy blows at the extravagant estimates for the various departments. For instance, he would not tolerate the continuance in office of a lot of government clerks with salaries varying from six hundred to two thousand dollars, when they could with considerably smaller amounts buy stale bread and wilted vegetables, abundant and healthful, to feed themselves and their families upon. So there was a general razeeing of the wages of these untitled stipendiaries. That was a glorious reform. Then, too, the standing army of this nation exceeded twenty thousand. Such an establishment, about one-tenth as large as the smallest standing army maintained by any other great power, was a piece of extravagance that excited the indignation and roused the reformatory energies of Mr. Randall to their highest pitch. Those who say he does not feel friendly to the army because of the fantastic tricks the soldiers played upon Mr. Randall's friends, in the Southern States from 1861 to 1865, but on the contrary he is hostile toward the army because of the memories of those bitter days, show how inadequate are their conceptions of Mr. Randall's character. That is not "the sort of a man he is." He is a genuine retrencher and reformer, and nothing escapes the vigilance of his optics and olfactories. Whenever there is a hand thrust improperly into the Treasury of the United States, Mr. Randall is sure to be ready and more than willing to give that hand such a rap as will cause its speedy withdrawal. The army, the navy, the high-toned clerks who have actually been getting away with ten or twelve hundred dollars a year, the Indian department—every branch of the public service had to "come down to business." There is one matter, however, which appears to have escaped Mr. Randall's notice, and it is a very remarkable fact, all things considered, that it did escape him. We allude to the salary-grab. It is the more remarkable that his vigilance should have failed to observe it. This is remarkable because Mr. Randall himself was one of the advocates of the salary grab law, and because he took the "retroactive pay" under the law. In fact, Mr. Randall is one of the original Simon-pure salary-grabbers himself, a fact which he seems entirely to forget when he is exposing to public gaze and condemnation the peccadilloes of other citizens and public servants. We call attention to this matter at this time, feeling sure that should it attract the notice of Mr. Randall, he will forthwith make his reform a consistent thing, on the outside at least, by returning the money he himself grabbed out of the Treasury. That is what a reformer must do under the circumstances; Mr. Randall is a reformer, every inch.

THE CITY SURVEYORSHIP.

On Wednesday evening last, His Honor the Mayor, sent into the Common Council the nomination of W. S. Chapman for City Surveyor. Mr. Chapman is a young man, of good character, and a competent engineer. But we are at a loss to perceive why His Honor wishes to change the City Surveyor. Mr. Taylor, the present incumbent, is an excellent officer, attentive, efficient and accommodating, and under his charge during the two years he has held the office, the service has been performed with less expense to the city than it had for many years before. Why then, should he not be retained? We have no relations with Mr. Taylor which would prompt us to make these remarks out of pesonal considerations. Indeed, we have but the slightest acquaintance with him. Nor do we entertain any other than the most friendly feelings for Mr. Chapman, with whom, in an acquaintance of a good many years, our relations have always been pleasant. We do not desire to be understood as speaking evil against Mr. Chapman, but simply that Mr. Taylor is an exceptionally good officer, has given very general satisfaction, has saved money to the taxpayers of the city; and that these things being undisputed, he ought not to be removed from the office. The Councilmen have a duty to perform in the premises, which we trust they will not fail to perform.

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY AND THE SOUTH.

The New York Times reviews, in a very moderate and dispassionate way, the claim of the Democracy that the harshness of Republican rule has been the cause of the disturbances that have occurred in the South and the disorganized and discordant state of society which has existed in that section since the war. The Times does not pretend to justify the iniquities of carpet-bag government, but traces the evil to its source. Says the Times, in conclusion:

> Neither truth nor expediency would be served by denying or attempting to explain away the painful facts which during this period stand conspicuous in Southern history. The harshness which attended the early stages of reconstruction is as undeniable as are the scandals which a misuse of Federal patronage have more recently occasioned. The blame, however, has not been confined to one quarter. Thadeus Stevens would have been much less powerful had not the criminal folly of ex-Confederate leaders played directly into his hands. The influences of men like Spencer would never have existed but for that unhappy division of races which proceeded inevitably from Democratic tactics. The carpet-baggers on one side have been made possible by the demagogues on the other. Moreover, the broad and conciliatory views to which Messrs. Hayes & Wheeler give formal expression have [illegible] ous violence has [illegible] vocates of reconciliation and helped to thwart their friendly plans. The desire to obliterate sectional animosities has remained nevertheless. The policy that would know no North, no South, no black or white, in the administration of federal affairs, outlives enmities and abuses, and once more calls upon the South for its discriminating judgment. Of this policy the nomination of Hayes and Wheeler is an embodiment, and the tone of their responses should not be lost upon the moderate men of the South.

We quoted from the New York Post, Bryant's paper, a few days ago, showing that journal strongly endorsed Hayes. And now comes the Evening Standard and declares Bryant is for Tilden, "the OREGONIAN to the contrary notwithstanding," for the proof of which it refers to the Springfield Republican. The question is reduced to this: Which is the better authority as to Bryant's position, the Post or the Republican? In other words, which knows best whom Bryant supports, Bryant himself or Bowles? We have an idea that Bryant knows best, and therefore that the Post is the higher authority on the subject; but we are open to conviction, and if the Standard has anything further to urge, we should be glad to hear it.

Hon. Geo. F. Hoar, who has long and ably represented the Ninth District of Massachusetts in Congress, declines a renomination. Four years ago, and again two years ago, he desired to retire from public life, but was so pressed by his constituents that he consented, reluctantly, to serve them longer. He declines positively this time, and states his reasons for doing so in a manner both delicate and handsome. He says: "The capacity to follow my profession will be lost by remaining away from it any longer, and it is neither for your interest nor his that your Representative should become dependent on holding office either for happiness, occupation or support."

As one of the benefits to be derived from the Centennial Exposition, Mr. Edward King mentions that in the line of agricultural implements and machinery America is far ahead of all other countries, and that the exhibition of our machinery at the Centennial will result in giving our country all the trade of South America. Brazil and the Argentine Confederacy are taking leading places among the agricultural nations of the world, and their trade in farming apparatus will be of great value to whatever country possesses it.

Brick Pomeroy is out with a Democratic daily paper, entitled the Great Campaign, the object of which is to defeat Tilden for President. That is the most damaging fact the Republicans have to meet in the campaign.

VITALITY OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

[From the Oregon City Enterprise.]

Nothing so strongly proves the vitality of the Republican party as the readiness with which it has recovered lost ground. The heaviest blows it received came from disclosures of corruption and official infidelity on the part of its own leaders. With the failure of the party to redeem its pledges with respect to civil service reform, and the final abandonment by the administration of all pretense to any effort to bring that reform about; with the persistent elevation of unworthy and incompetent men, in spite of repeated protests within the party and without; with the administration of the Presidency as a private perquisite and not as a solemn trust; with the rapid and appalling succession of disclosures concerning Republicans in all stations, from those of pension agent to cabinet minister; with official brokerage and larceny of all grades the practice in every department of the government—with all these appointments, charges, disclosures and scandals, treading closely on each other's heels in shameful succession, the prestige of the Republican party, once pure and patriotic, seemed almost gone, and the party itself crumbling away to dishonor. This was only a few months ago. It was not long before the better nature of the party began to assert itself. The practices that had distinguished—if to dishonor is to distinguish—the administration were freely and frankly condemned, and all the best forces of the party bent themselves to the work of reformation. Then the Democrats came to the rescue of their opponents. The country, which had been drifting toward Democracy, checked itself at the sight of a Democratic House struggling with its own incompetence, overrun with office seekers who had to be turned out of office almost as soon as they got in, and managing its mud campaign with so little skill that its own leaders were as badly bespattered as the men they made their targets. The result of all this is that the men who met in Cincinnati discarded all ring candidates, all who were not above suspicion, and gave to the public an upright, honest man as its candidate for the Presidency. Its reaction for good we hope is permanent, as its vitality is robust, and "its past a picture for Pride to peep at with pleasure."

We thought it would come to this. Every week brings a new claimant for the honor of having broken up the Tweed ring, and, of course, each new pretender finds it to be necessary to abstract somewhat of the credit for that achievement which has been quite erroneously attributed to the Times. At last, the real truth has been discovered, and the future historian of the period will be called upon to notice the fact that the Times "made every effort to shield the delinquents and to impugn the motives and conduct of the governor, [Tilden,] and at one time it allied itself for the purpose with a certain Kelly, who has succeeded Tweed in the management of the Tammany organization." To be sure, this stuff has no better authority than the London Saturday Review, which can display more knowledge about the constitution of the Swiss Cantons and more ignorance about the affairs of the United States than any journal read by intelligent men. The remarkable assertion we have quoted appears in an article on the St. Louis convention, in which it is also stated that the Democratic leaders have no hope of carrying "Massachusetts or Philadelphia," and in which are given other almost equally novel and interesting views of American politics. It is, perhaps, amazing that idiotic nonsense like this should find admission into an English weekly of the first-class, but it is much more surprising that American journals, with some pretensions to respectability, should be induced to print, for the benefit of Governor Tilden, statements only a trifle less absurd, though, from their less transparent falsehood, much better calculated to mislead.—*N. A CARD.

MR. A. W. PIPER, WHO KEEPS THE "BOCA Beer" charges me to be a swindler. He claims that I sell any kind of beer for "Boca." I obtained through my agent a quantity of Boca beer in order to satisfy some of my customers. The supply was exhausted before the second invoice arrived. Parties come in and ask for Bock beer which I keep at times, and as I sell it. I am asked for Bock beer by persons who want the "Boca," and if I give bock beer it is the fault of the customer. I do not sell any beer for Boca other than that which I buy for such from my San Francisco agent. The only beer I keep is from the Steilacoom brewery, and the fact that my business has increased largely in the last few months is evidence that it is the most popular beer for sale in the city. To those who drink "Boca beer" I would say that I have a supply on the "John L. Stephens," and will tap it when delivered at my saloon.

LOUIS FEURER,
Agent Steilacoom Brewery.

I have received a quantity of the "Boca" beer and will tap it on Saturday, when those who desire to satisfy themselves as to its being the genuine article can do so.

How is this for a Bargain?

FRIDAY MORNING AUGUST [illegible]

CITY.

THAT CASE OF SMALLPOX.—[illegible] when the [illegible] passed Astoria Wednesday [illegible] failed [illegible] was [illegible] which or instance [illegible] why the vessel was not stopped in [illegible] quarantine at that port. Among the passengers who came on board at San Francisco were five Chinamen so far as could be determined these Chinamen appeared in good health and no further thought was given or attention paid to them. While the steamer was on the way up the river the purser and freight clerk began to collect tickets. Mr. Hodges the freight clerk went among the steerage passengers and while collecting the tickets discovered one of the Chinamen lying in his berth. He appeared to be sick with some kind of fever and his face was covered with pustules. The officers of the vessel were notified and when a point was reached a short distance below Weidler's mill it was determined to come to anchor until the authorities of the city were informed of the fact. When the Mayor, Chief Lappeus and several members of the Council were notified of the case, a short consultation was held and it was determined to remove the Chinaman at once to the pest house where he could be comfortably provided for. Accordingly this was done yesterday morning about 10 o'clock. The Celestial was taken out of his berth by persons who have had the smallpox passed through one of the ports lowered into a boat conveyed to the shore where he was placed in an express wagon and hauled to the pest house where he is now. After some consultation it was decided to allow the steamer to come alongside the dock which she did do about 10 o'clock yesterday morning. The vessel was thoroughly deodorized and sprinkled with carbolic acid and other disinfectants. Every precaution was observed to prevent the contagion from spreading and it is thought that there will be no more cases. At an early hour yesterday morning the passengers were allowed to debark and the work of discharging cargo commenced. It would be prudent for the citizens to vaccinate be careful of their dirt and use plenty of disinfectants.

WILD SILK WHEAT.—Mr. Collins of East Portland has left at this office a sample of a variety of wheat which he informs us grows in Alaska in a wild state. Two years ago he obtained about a tablespoonful of the grain which had been brought down to this city. Collins planted the grain and last year the yield amounted to nearly a quart. He distributed the grain around among his neighbors keeping only a small quantity which he planted early last spring. The bunch which he left at this office was taken from what Mr. Collins had raised this season. The stalks on exhibition here are about two and a half feet high and the length of the heads will average two and a half inches. The kernels are large plump and well developed and the meat or body of the grains appears to be very nutritious. The heads are covered with long spear like beards which imparts to the grain an appearance of barley rye or the Egyptian wheat. Mr. Collins informs us that the grain is met with extensively in Alaska. It usually grows in wet, swampy soil and is in many places as common as wild grass. Although found in a wild, uncultivated state the grain evidently was at some time raised like other cereals. Many years ago no doubt, the grain was scattered either accidentally or intentionally by some of the Russian or English settlers in Alaska and thus became widely distributed and grew wild about the country.

MULBERRIES.—Mrs. J. H. McMillen of East Portland, left at this office yesterday a small quantity of mulberries, raised from several trees which are growing in that lady's yard. These berries are quite large, and have lost nothing in sweetness and delicacy of flavor by being raised in a strange and in some respects uncongenial climate. The mulberry trees growing in Mrs. McMillen's yard from [illegible] fruit before us was gathered were raised from seeds obtained from trees under the shade of which that lady played and among the branches of which she climbed when a little girl more than a quarter of a century ago. It may seem a sentimental thought but the sight of the berries no doubt brings vividly to that lady's mind the remembrance of innocent childhood and its many happy associations.

HALF FARE RATES.—Arrangements will be made with the officers of the O. & C. R. R. Co. by which ministers and their wives attending the conference to be held at Albany August 2d will pay full fare in going to the conference but will return free on presenting the certificate of the secretary of the conference. Rev. A. C. Fairchild presiding elder of Puget Sound district states that arrangements have been made with Gen. J. W. Sprague for ministers of that district to pay full fare in going over the North Pacific Railroad to conference and return free of charge by procuring a certificate from the secretary of the conference. This arrangement includes also the wives of the ministers.

HOME FOR FALLEN WOMEN.—The [illegible] says: The Home for friendless women recently established in this city through the disinterested labors and sacrifices of devoted Christian women is now under the superintendency of Mrs. Cummings of East Portland. Mrs. Cummings is a Christian lady of large experience cheerful and agreeable. She is the capital friend of the friendless. A full meeting of the managers and all other ladies interested in the success of the undertaking are respectfully invited to the meeting to be held this afternoon at [illegible] o'clock at the Unitarian church in this city.

ELEGANT ENVELOPES AND NOTE PAPER.—[illegible] K. Gill & Co. have now at hand a large assortment of the most elegant fancy envelopes and note paper of the latest styles. They are of unique design and handsomely set off with gilt and tints rendering them peculiarly appropriate for invitations, friendly and sentimental correspondence. The principal styles are Acacia Papeterie, Renown Papeteria and Sierra Papeteria. They will doubtless be all the rage.

[illegible].—The little girl who [illegible] Portland last week, in company with Mrs. Maxwell it seems did so through [illegible] at last so Mrs. Maxwell informs the Olympia [illegible]. She was at the residence of [illegible] Smith about six [illegible] when Mr. [illegible] her [illegible] to make [illegible] with [illegible] return to her [illegible]

[illegible]

A SLIGHT(?) MISTAKE.—The Hillsboro Independent says: The humbug Prof. Bill [illegible] who has chartered the Portland papers which [illegible] the Portland public again. It will be remembered that he was [illegible] and was [illegible] Portland soon afterward. [illegible] A humbug and [illegible] traveled through this county about a year ago. He [illegible] persons that he found it necessary to assume a new name [illegible] dodge was too transparent [illegible] part.

ONE [illegible].—[illegible] tried what they supposed to be a deer swimming the Columbia river near [illegible] Oregon. As there were no men about [illegible] while the other went to the river bank to prevent the supposed deer from [illegible] until [illegible] could be procured. As the animal neared the shore the lady guarding [illegible] discovered the deer to be a large sized black hog [illegible]. Presently the other lady returned with a good Democrat [illegible] blowing like a porpoise ready to kill [illegible]. When he realized what the critter was his ideas of feasting on venison steak of his own capture instantly vanished and he remarked "Well, we had a little [illegible] excitement." The question to all is where did his pigship come from? The Columbia at that part of the river must be from a mile and a half to one and three quarters wide.

A LONG SEPARATION.—Rev. Isaac Dillon editor of the Advocate publishes the following interesting incident concerning himself: On Tuesday last we were favored with a call from Mr. Perry Scott, of Ironton Ohio, a brother of Capt. J. B. Scott of the steamer City of Salem. We met Mr. Perry Scott but once before and that was in the year 1844 at a temperance meeting held at Scottsville, Scioto county, Ohio, at which we made our first attempt at public speaking. Mr. Scott remembered the occasion well and was pleased to compliment the effort. We hope he will be as well pleased with Oregon as many other Buckeyes appear to be.

A FIRE.—Yesterday afternoon immense volumes of black smoke were observed to rise from the timber in an easterly direction several miles beyond the asylum. The smoke rose in dense clouds apparently from one place for some time and darkened the whole heavens. It could scarcely have come from burning brush or timber as the fire seemed to be confined to a very small area not larger than a building. We have been unable to ascertain the exact location of the fire or whether there was any destruction of property.

PAID DEARLY.—Wednesday morning a man named Louis Vincent was arraigned in police court charged with assault and battery, and for conducting himself in a disorderly manner. For these offenses he was fined in the round sum of about $30. Vincent liquidated and was discharged. Some time during Wednesday night he got gloriously drunk and became very boisterous. Officer Sheehan walked him off to jail and yesterday morning he was fined $10 for his sport. He paid and was again set at liberty.

WILL SOME ONE EXPLAIN?

PORTLAND, Aug. [illegible] 1876.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

The indications are that the culpable carelessness, not to use a stronger term by which smallpox was imported into San Francisco is to find a parallel here. From the DAILY OREGONIAN of to-day it appears that the steamer John L. Stephens arrived on the 2d inst. with one (?) case of smallpox on board—that the patient would be removed to the pesthouse the vessel fumigated and then the passengers and freight discharged. Without speaking of the utter inefficiency of these steps to prevent the spread of the pestilence one may in view of the facts be permitted to ask a few questions. Why was the vessel allowed to leave Astoria and to come here at all? What examination did the health officer at Astoria make? Did he make personal examination or rely on representations made to him? If so—why? Will the old and threadbare excuse be attempted in this case that the disease had not developed itself at the time the health officer boarded the vessel at Astoria? Was not the duty of extraordinary vigilance imposed on the health officer when examining a vessel arriving from an infected port? Are not the health and the lives of our citizens of more importance than the regular arrival and departure of steamers, or is it better that the wise provisions of the quarantine laws should be neglected or evaded in order that corporations may amass wealth or officials enjoy a sinecure? PATER.

THE TURF.

TROTTING RACES.—To-morrow afternoon there will be two trotting matches over the East Portland Trotting Park. The first race will be for a purse of $200 mile heats two in three. The following horses have been entered: L. B. Lindsay names b. g. Farmer [illegible] to wagon; J. J. Welsh names ch. g. Mystery to harness; B. B. Ackerman names b. h. Bishaw to harness. The second race will be for a purse of $75 mile heats three in five. The following horses have been named: L. B. Lindsay, g. m. Minnie; B. B. Ackerman, b. g. Tommy; J. J. Welsh, b. m. Fannie. The races will commence at [illegible] o'clock sharp.

The demand for Mrs. Fahrer's New Remedy for the lungs is still increasing rapidly. On its merits alone this medicine in a short time has gained a popularity with the public that few other remedies can boast of. Its promptness and sure relief in all the various diseases of the throat and lungs and its many astonishing cures in chronic cases of Asthma, Bronchitis, Dyspepsia, &c., have excited the wonder of the public, and yet with such magic power it is entirely harmless in its nature, soothing in effect and so pleasant to the taste that children will cry for it. It is prepared by Mrs. I. Fahrer, Monmouth, Oregon. Sold by druggists generally.

THE EASTERN BATTLE FIELD

From the New York Times we [illegible] the following, concerning the field of [illegible] between the Turks and the [illegible]:

Nissa (Nish, Nassus) has at all times been an important point of [illegible] [illegible] plain evidently [illegible] This plain forms a triangle the point of which [illegible] where the Nissava [illegible] Morava. [illegible] well watered but [illegible] Bulgarian settlements. The view of Nissa [illegible] little to the ideas awakened by its [illegible] [illegible] by the Austrians [illegible] [illegible] with the latter [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Attila destroyed the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the Grand Vizier defeated the Servians by the [illegible] assembled a fresh army at Nissa of 30,000 men who were defeated by the Markgraf of Baden with but 17,000 men. [illegible] that time the fortunes of Nissa varied. In 1690 Nissa capitulated to the Turks, and [illegible] it was retaken by the Austrians but finally Gen. Doch it surrendered the place to Ali Pasha without attempting to defend it. One more great tragedy occurred near Nissa. In the year 1809 the Servian [illegible] prince or captain of a district, Stephan Sindjelitch from Ressava at the head of a Servian army penetrated to within the neighborhood of the fortress and entrenched himself on a hill about two hundred feet high. The Turks attacked him with a superior force and perceiving that all was lost he applied a match to some gunpowder and blew himself up with his men and his assailants. The Turks erected a horrible monument in honor of the victory—the Kele Kulesi (Tower of Skulls) in which from wall over 2,000 Servian heads were built up. The town of Alexinatz is near the most northern point of this plain. It is to this town that the Servians are reported to have retreated. Back of Alexinatz is a strong little [illegible]. It was in this little [illegible] that in 1737 the Austrian Marshal Khevenhuller [illegible] when he retreated two battalions of troops that had [illegible] there. The fort was attacked by the Turks and all killed down to two men who managed to escape.

IN BUSINESS IN A HAREM.—A few years ago an English woman named [illegible] who kept a shop at Pera summoned from England to aid her in her business a young niece who proved to be extremely pretty and not less intelligent. Soon after her arrival she took it into her head to study Turkish representing to her aunt that such knowledge would be of great advantage to their trade as the Turkish ladies would naturally prefer to make their purchases where they could be understood without the aid of an interpreter. As the young girl was at once clever and studious and industrious she soon succeeded in acquiring the language and a number of the female members of the richest Turkish families came to the English shop. One day the pretty niece went to the harem of Prince Murad to take home some article ordered by his principal wife. She never returned and when her aunt sent in search of her she received a cool message of farewell from the young lady herself who had become the [illegible] wife of the heir to the throne who is the present Sultan.

DO NOT SING THAT SONG AGAIN

This beautiful song by Hugh F McDermott [illegible] translated into many languages [illegible] the world round

Do not sing that song again
[illegible]
[illegible] blast
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
In the long long ago

Do not sing that song again
I've lived my years [illegible]
And my hair is thin and gray
And [illegible]
On the dark [illegible]
I'm a wreck of idle dreams
And [illegible] on the rack
At the weary looking back
[illegible]
In the long long ago

Do not sing that song again
[illegible]
It brings so [illegible] back the time
When my manhood felt its prime
When the comrades dear and true
Closer warmer fonder grew
In the hour of friendship's proof
With the false ones stood aloof
And their friendship was but show
In the long long ago

Do not sing that song again
It distracts my weary brain
Ah, too well! alas! I know
It is time for me to go
And to leave to younger eyes
The mild mystery of the skies
And this mighty world I tread
And the grander age ahead

There's a mist upon the river
And there's blackness in the [illegible]
And in dreams I pass forever,
While sad music wafts [illegible]

THE BOY, THE BEETLE AND THE DOG

A SKETCH FROM MARK TWAIN'S "TOM SAWYER"

The minister gave out his text and droned along monotonously through an argument which was so prosy that many a head by and by began to nod and yet it was an argument that dealt in limitless fire and brimstone and thinned the predestined elect down to a company so small as to be hardly worth the saving Tom counted the pages of the sermon after church he always knew how many pages there had been but he seldom knew anything else about the discourse However this time he was really interested for a little while The minister made a grand and moving picture of the assembling together of the world's hosts at the millennium, when the lion and the lamb should lie down together and a little child should lead them But the pathos, the lesson, the moral of the great spectacle were lost upon the boy, he only thought of the conspicuousness of the principal character before the on looking nations his face lit up with the thought, and he said to himself that he wished he could be that child, if it was a tame lion Now he lapsed into suffering again as the dry argument was resumed Presently he bethought himself of a treasure he had and got it out It was a large black beetle, with formidable jaws—a "pinch bug" he called it It was in a percussion cap box The first thing the beetle did was to take him by the finger A natural fillip followed, the beetle went floundering into the aisle and lit on its back and the hurt finger went into the boy's mouth The beetle lay there working its helpless legs, unable to turn over Tom eyed it and longed for it, but it was safe out of his reach Other people, uninterested in the sermon, found relief in the beetle and they eyed it, too Presently a vagrant poodle-dog came idling along, sad at heart, lazy with the summer's softness and the quiet, weary of captivity sighing for change He spied the beetle, the drooping tail lifted and wagged He surveyed the prize walked around it, smelt it from a safe distance, walked around it again, grew bolder, and took a closer smell, then lifted his lip and made a gingerly snatch at it just missing it made another, and another, began to enjoy the diversion, subsided to his stomach with the beetle between his paws, and continued his experiments, grew weary at last, and then indifferent and absent-minded His head nodded, and little by little his chin descended and touched the enemy, who seized it. There was a sharp yell, a flirt of the poodle's head and the beetle fell a couple of yards away and lit on its back once more The neighboring spectators shook with a gentle inward joy, several faces went behind fans and handkerchiefs, and Tom was entirely happy The dog looked foolish and probably felt so but there was resentment in his heart too and a craving for revenge So he went to the beetle and began a wary attack on it again jumping at it from every point of a circle lighting with his forepaws within an inch of the creature, making even closer snatches at it with his teeth and jerking his head till his ears flapped again But he grew tired once more after a while, tried to amuse himself with a fly, but found no relief followed an ant around with his nose close to the floor and quickly wearied of that yawned sighed forgot the beetle entirely and sat down on it Then there was a wild yelp of anger, and the poodle went sailing up the aisle; the yelps continued and so did the dog he crossed the house in front of the altar he flew down the other aisle, he crossed before the doors, he clamored up the home stretch his anguish grew with his progress till presently he was a woolly comet, moving in its orbit with the gleam and speed of light At last the frantic sufferer sheered from its course, and sprang into its master's lap he flung it out of the window, and the voice of distress quickly thinned away and died in the distance * * * Tom Sawyer went home quite cheerful thinking to himself that there was some satisfaction about divine service when there was a bit of variety in it He had but one marring thought, he was willing that the dog should play with his pinch bug, but he did not think it was upright to carry it off

A JUBILANT REPORTER

HE IS GLAD BECAUSE HE WAS NOT SENT TO THE WAR.

[From the Laramie Sentinel

The more we think it over the more we congratulate ourselves that we didn't go as a reporter with the Indian expedition for although it is very pleasant to write up a long Indian fight, it rather knocks the romance out of it to write up the item in Paradise, or in case that no passes are granted to editors and reporters, to be obliged to get up an account of the engagement on fire-proof parchment and run the risk of securing a reliable medium by which to convey it to our paper All these things taken into consideration we are glad we didn't go Of course what the country needs is good patriotic volunteers to go forward and sustain the flag and all that sort of thing, but the reason we don't hanker for such active life is that we object to being promoted so precipitately We have never been noted for our precipitation and to be promoted from an ordinary newspaper reporter to a shining angel without a scalp is an honor to which we do not aspire There is something about being sent home without any liver or digestive apparatus and a spinal column with only five or six good wholesome vertebrae in it, that always strikes a chill to our patriotism And to think how a man is liable to have a tomahawk in among his vitals when he is thinking about something else [illegible] to be cut down in a moment in the twinkling of an eye with your dirty stockings [illegible] and two or three suspender buttons [illegible] and an unpaid wash bill in your pocket [illegible] never known how large a majority Hayes and Wheeler [illegible] all these things [illegible] convince [illegible] however [illegible] less [illegible] Centennial [illegible] The [illegible] would never [illegible] division [illegible] ably [illegible] Democratic tactics [illegible] bugle on one side have been had [illegible] the demagogues on the other [illegible] broad and conciliatory views to which Hayes & Wheeler give forcible [illegible]

The progress of the week so far has developed [illegible] portant features in [illegible] noticed at [illegible] for several days [illegible] with some little change [illegible] in New York and corresponding fluctuation in the prices of currency here [illegible] tranquil [illegible] worthy of comment The feeling in regard to silver appears somewhat [illegible] as will be seen by our telegraphic [illegible] In the local market there is no noticeable change in the rate at which dealers are receiving or paying it out The advance below may be caused by anticipation of the action of Congress on the silver bill or by some temporary demand for shipment to China The usual rate of discount 10 per cent on trade dollars and 5 per cent on other silver are still maintained An Eastern exchange notes the fact that the redemption of fractional currency [illegible] has been going on for several weeks during which the amount of the latter issued is [illegible] numbers $11000 000 leaving on hand in the office of the Treasurer of the United States the Assistant Treasurers and depositories [illegible] and $1[illegible] 60 in transit from [illegible] Notwithstanding the large disbursement in silver currency is very scarce and small traders are obliged to pay two or three per cent for it Even the fractional currency is rapidly disappearing by some process of rapid absorption thus causing an additional inconvenience There are several very obvious reasons for the disappearance of silver coin thus far almost as fast as issued In the first place silver is so much of a novelty that almost everybody who has had a chance at the new coins is hoarding a few of them in his pocket not with any expectation that they will appreciate in value but as tokens and keepsakes Then again express companies tradesmen and others to whom small change is indispensable in anticipation of a scarcity have laid by considerable accumulations of currency which helps to contract the amount of small change in circulation and so sagaciously bring on the inconveniences which they fear Add to these causes the fact that some silver is bought for exportation to countries where it is receivable on nearly the same basis as gold and it will be seen that there is abundant occasion for the absorption of silver coin Each of these causes after a while must cease to operate The novelty of coin will wear off soon and the pieces treasured as keepsakes will be started in circulation The necessities of trade will let loose the currency or coin accumulated and held by the various business firms and corporations The exportation of silver will cease as soon as the very limited demand is supplied The scarcity of change therefore is not likely to long continue

Domestic Produce.

The telegrams from Liverpool and San Francisco concerning the advance in wheat while doubtless correct have not materially affected the local market for the very good reason that no transactions have occurred to develop a change but the feeling is improved here and offers, if any made would be perhaps a few cents per cental higher Comparatively little wheat has yet been threshed and farmers are too busy harvesting this week to devote much attention to the markets The receipts are very light and no increase is anticipated for nearly a fortnight yet when the new crop will be ready for market in considerable volume We note the improved tone of the market abroad with congratulations to the farmers and shippers as it will, if sustained, produce a better demand and a more active trade not only in the commodity itself but also in other staple goods and products The demand for oats hay and mill feed is good, considering the season of the year and though except for the latter prices are low they average well with other produce Provisions and dairy products are unchanged though eggs have declined a trifle Wool still reaches the market in important quantities, and the slightly improved feeling in the trade hitherto noticed is kept up by the absence of any special discouraging features in the reports from abroad though those reports fail to disclose any particular upward movement in the Eastern market. Hides peltries etc are in favorable request and our former quotations well sustained
